NYC is a big city with lots of people and in my opinion the best city. Being a New Yorker is great and you have access to every thing!

NYC has loads of transportation like buses, taxis and subways! The people who drive these vehicles are very nice. One time my grandma came to the city and the taxi driver helped load her walker and suitcase, also when we come back from Costco the taxi driver helps load and unload the loads of groceries. The vehicles run 24/7 so you will all ways have some public transportation. According to CNN There are 468 subway stops (maybe even more).

NYC has a pinch of every thing, There are many places and restaurants that make you feel like you are somewhere else, like when you're in the park you might feel like you're in the suburbs or when you're in Chinatown you might feel like you're in China! When I went to Chinatown I saw toys from China, good seafood, and even a run-away crab! At Central Park, I usually walk around, see where my mom and dad got engaged, and go to play grounds I've never been to. And some times I go on a boat and ride on the lake or rent a toy boat and control it.

NYC is known for its many skyscrapers. They represent freedom and a lot of skyscrapers are businesses. Skyscrapers are being built more and more today, and according to Time Out NY, “when people talk about skylines, we bet that midtown Manhattan - home to the cloud-piercing spires of the Empire State, Chrysler Buildings, and the Freedom Tower – is what they’re imagining.”

Now as you can see, NYC is the best city and you have access to everything.
