

The Uniqueness of Art

By Lily Buyer

What does art mean to you? Do you like art? Do you not? What connects you to art? I think, everywhere you look there is art around you. Art can be buildings, museums, sculptures, and many more! But art is more than just paintings, and architecture. It is also song writing, acting, and it could be drawing something that has your religion or beliefs. All of the different and unique arts can inspire people to do amazing things with their life. It can also teach people how to be creative.

ACTING

This is one way to express art

Painting can inspire people to start their own art company. According to an interview with Stephanie Sewell, a faculty member of an art company called Pinot's Pallet, in L.A California, she said what she loves most about her job is "It's seeing them realize for the first time that they have a talent. Just watching that light bulb go off, it is special seeing them be proud of their art." In another interview with Kathy Guccione, who is also a faculty member in Pinot's Pallet (L.A California) she said, that she started this company because she loves how "people get in touch with their creative side. I love how people who don't do this daily, just paint like they have been here for years!"

SONG
WRITING/
SINGING

This is another way to express art

Other people's art can also inspire people to do their own unique "thing". One day when I was going to Central park with my sister and my dad I thought I saw a man selling drawings on a stand, like all the other people on the block of Central Park. But then as I got closer I noticed that he was doing something completely different!! He was not drawing pictures; instead he made sculptures out of wires. The man said that he had made all of these statues with his wife. I was really fascinated and it made me feel like these sculptures were actually coming alive!! That's when I wondered what can I make that is new and impressive, that can also inspire other people? The moment I got home I took out my materials and started to ' a collage. I knew it wasn't new but it did help me impress other people!! My sister loved the idea so she decided to make a collage too!!

Lastly art can inspire people because of how different and unique it is. According to Molly Prather she says on WWW.eHow.com/aboutart-influence “art has shaped and inspired civilization for thousands of years. Museums, Galleries, Theaters and venues are all different but even so they still count as art.” I can relate to this because some of the weirdest things that people think are just silly and stupid other people think that is it considered an art, which it is!

Song writing and acting is still considered an art even though it may seem, act, and be completely different. Molly Prather says that over the past thousands of years art has inspired some people to even donate money so others can have supplies for painting or drawing! “They want everyone to feel the creativity art brings to them.”

In 2012 when I was moving to New York City I had to get rid of a lot of my stuff so we could actually move to New York. I was still deciding where I would put all of my art supplies, when my mom had told me that we should donate to people who don't have any supplies. I agreed with her and in the end was proud of myself for doing so.

In conclusion, art can make people's lives change for the better. Whether it's starting your own art company, helping other people learn to do art, or making a line for your first time, art has impacted people to do more and more each day, that's why people love art.
