

Nature In Central Park Is Beautiful

By: Spencer Brenner

Central Park is a great place to sit back and enjoy yourself. It isn't just a great place to relax, it's also home to hundreds of plants and bugs! These are not the only inhabitants. Central Park is also home to fish, birds and many more! Central Park has a conservatory; the conservatory is a spot where you could see birds, and wildlife in general. The conservatory has 3 separate gardens, The English, French and Italian. I think that nature in Central Park is beautiful!

Moving onto The North garden. According to www.conservatorygarden.org, this garden is the French garden! The garden has a fountain named the Three Dancing Maidens. Around the fountain are patterns of flowers, most of which are Tulips. However, tulips are not the only plant! According to Kristine Kaeser-Dessberg, a science teacher at MNS, "This garden has over 2,000 flowers." This just supports that nature in Central Park is beautiful! This garden is most likely the most beautiful one of them all!

According to www.conservatorygarden.org, the main garden is the Italian garden; this garden is one of things that make Central Park's nature beautiful! Not only that, but the garden is located in a rectangular box. The water in the fountain is shot into the sky. This garden is easy to access compared to the other gardens. The reason for this is because this garden is easily the biggest out of them all!

Finally, according to www.conservatorygarden.org, the South garden is the English garden. This garden is made up of a number of plants planted in patterns. One part of this garden features a birdbath. This is made up of two statues, one of which is holding the birdbath. This garden is breath taking to walk through. This garden is somewhere you would like to visit!

In conclusion, I think that nature in Central Park is beautiful! I sure hope that this essay was helpful, and I hope you enjoy my essay!
