

Drawing Can Affect Your Life

By Chance Bachas

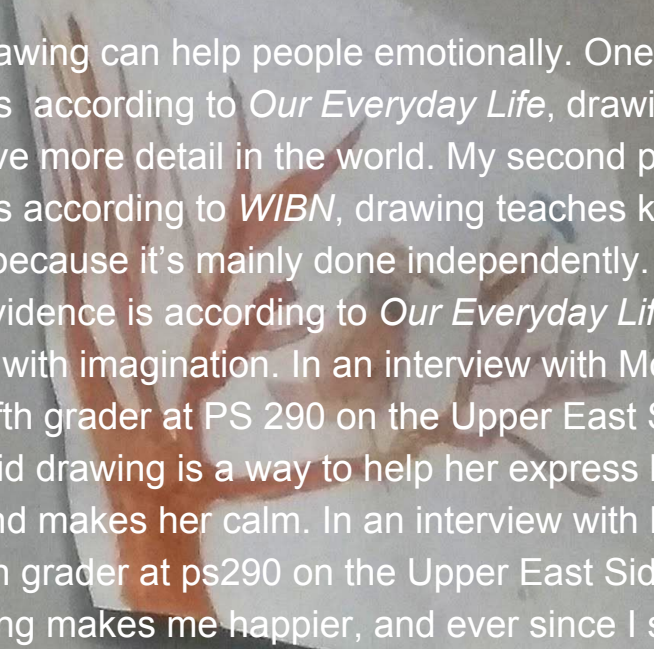

The Arrow

Kids Art Gallery

Some people think drawing is a waste of time. I know drawing isn't a waste of time. I think drawing is something that helps you express your feelings and develops your use of imagination. Drawing can affect your life.

Drawing can help people emotionally. One piece of evidence is according to Our Everyday Life, drawing helps you observe more detail in the world. My second piece of evidence is according to WIBN, drawing teaches kids to feel confident because it's mainly done independently. My third piece of evidence is according to Our Everyday Life, drawing helps kids with imagination. In an interview with Monika Popaj, a fifth grader at PS 290 on the Upper East Side, Monika said drawing is a way to help her express her feelings and makes her calm. In an interview with Brianna Lum, a fifth grader at ps290 on the Upper East Side, Brianna said drawing makes me happier, and ever since I started drawing it made me feel creative, and talented.

Drawing can help kids academically. According to WIBN, drawing helps kids with their thinking skills which they can use to help them with what they face in the future. According to Our Everyday Life, drawing encourages children to compare shapes, sizes, proportions and textures. One time when I stood in front of my classmates and taught a drawing lesson on the board and on that day drawing made me feel confident.

Drawing made me the person that I am today because it taught me to feel confident about what I'm drawing.

These are two pictures that I took from different angles.

Look closely at the detail

Look closely can you see the hand?