Have you ever looked at the earth and noticed that everyone has a part? Because everyone does have a part even the beggars. If no one had a job our world would be nothing. How do we eat? Farmers, Chefs, Hunters. How do we stay safe? Doctors, Police, Firemen. I think you get the point. We need everyone on this earth to keep this earth going. Have you ever thought about how jobs are our resources because they are. Every job matters just as much as the other.

Have you ever walked down a street and noticed how clean it was? You probably have You probably haven't because you don't pay attention to the smallest job like a garbage collector or a window washer. That brings me to a thought that the smallest job matters just as much as the biggest. One detail is according to garbage collectors, "Waiters and garbage collectors usually don't get much respect for the job they do." Also, according to garbage collectors, "All jobs are important to the economy."

Have you ever noticed that some of the most important jobs are ones that help people? That's why I think the jobs that are important are the ones that help people. One detail is according to the website Chron, "Teachers have the ability to make a positive impact on their students." In an interview with an award winning doctor David Scher he said, "I feel like I make a real difference in people's lives." In another interview with a police officer she said, "I can help people and children in particular."

Some people win the job lottery by getting the exact job that they want. But even if you win the job lottery every job still has negatives. In an interview with Manhattan New School teacher, Catlin Klenk, she said one negative part about teaching is all the paperwork. Sometimes doctors don't only have tools in their hands sometimes they have people's lives. Chron stated, "People who suffered critical injuries need a doctor to attend to them quickly."

It's time wrap this essay up but I hope now you know about all different types of jobs and how they matter just as much as another.
