

Buy One, Get One, Sold Out ☺

BY: BENJAMIN MILLIGAN

Don't you just hate it when stores or any place is sold out of something? Don't even bring that up because I just hate when it happens.

It's your child's birthday and he wants the Lego Batman set. You looked all over the store and you finally found the toy and then a child jumps in front of you and takes the last one. The toy is SOLD OUT. Now you have 5 minutes to get home and get your child a present. So you get an I Tunes card and leave. When you get half way home you remember this morning your son broke his I pod so for your son's birthday you give him a free pass.

The next day you're at the ice cream store and you're gonna buy a vanilla ice cream cone with sprinkles. You've been waiting for an hour and the kid in front of you buys the last ice cream cone. So you get in a big fight and the guy who works at the store kicks you out and now you're late for work and you have no ice cream! I bet you're mad right now.

One day you're at the movies and you are going to see a movie and the guy says "sold out". One day you're at school and the person in front of you buys the last pudding and you get really furious about it so you scream "NO"! One day your at fantastic kids toys and you need one card to finish your basketball sticker book and the guy in front of you buys the last basketball pack and he gets the card you need. Are you getting the picture?

I think that instead of things being sold out if people love a certain thing a lot they should get multiple copies of it so it never runs out and every body will love it and it won't run out. The only problem is that then someone will take the whole stack and then there's no more for you...so someone else will have to deal with the product being SOLD OUT!
