Mermaids

Hey did you ever think about that many people around the world have their own beliefs about Mermaids, and how they came about. Then read my article!!! 😊

Many people now and in the 1900s say that most people believe in Mermaids from literature.

The Story Of Hans

Many people thought is it possible for humans to be part human part fish? Early as the 1800s some people drew what people now think of as figures of mermaids. Hans Christian Anderson wrote the story of The Little Mermaid. In 1837, people love love the story of The Little Mermaid so many people liked the story they decided to make it a movie in 1989. This made the tale so popular.

There were mermaid fans all over the world. In 2010 Disney decided to turn it into a Broadway production. But Hans was not all that was there. Since there has been such a craze about Mermaids there seems to have been sightings of these creatures. In 2012 on the Animal Planet Channel on the show River monsters they had a documentary on mermaids. Six to seven months later people said it was fake? Even before the year 2000 there has been more occurring.....

Greek Mythology

More than everything in literature people believes in legends. Some people believe in it from Greek mythology. That means myths and legends, like this legend. There was a goddess named Astragals she accidentally killed her best friend she was so shy and sad because... 1 she was a god, 2 she thought some one else was going to kill her. But she was a god so they gave her a punishment they made her a mermaid.

Sailors said when they went on journeys they told another legends of Greek mythology. In the 1800's people that were blind or had poor eye sight saw that animal called manatee's which look like big seals and though they were people but when they swam down they saw their fins and they thought they were mermaids.

There is no actual physical evidence of mermaids existing and have never been found. ☹️
