

Shelter Animals

{ By: Alyssa-Marie Davila

Animals in the Shelter

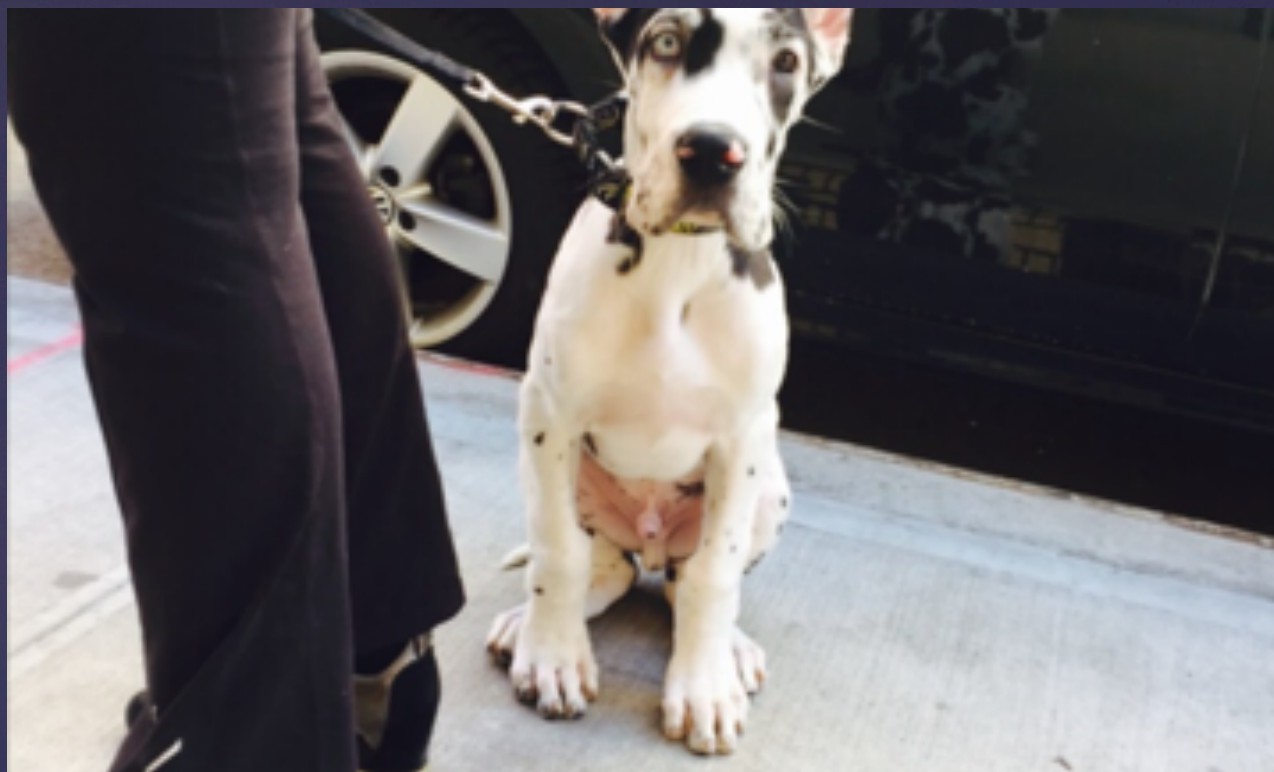

Animals all around the world, especially in New York are in shelters, dying, crying and in horrible pain wishing they have a home. According to DOsomething.org “2.7 million cats and dogs are being killed because there is no more room in the shelters.” The people that work at the shelters are trying their best to cure any sickness and diseases. To be more comfortable than in the shelter you can become a foster parent for a pet, for a time until he/she is adopted. The people that work at the shelters train to be house trained so it will be easier for the new owner to deal with the animal. If you adopt a pet then it will give you lots of love. Adopting an animal will save a life and make an animal happier than ever. Animals are happier with homes.

I can scramble around the couch and I don't need to be cooped upon a small cage.

I am nice and cozy! It's much better than being in a small cage

I can take nice fresh walks with my owner

I can sit around and chill with my family

I can sleep whenever I want and however I want, knowing someone loves me.

I can take nice fresh walks even though I am a kitty cat.

I can play around with my family and be happy!

I can meet other people and hang around with them.

Animals show little ones new things.

They are special creatures, and you never know what amazing, funny, exiting moments you will experience with a pet. Animals are something amazing, and they are happier with a loving family and a wonderful home. If you would like to find out more of how to help animals then visit <https://www.dosomething.org/facts/11-facts-about-animal-homelessness>