

Central Park Is Beautiful

By: Jordyn Grover

When you look around Central Park, all you see is a bunch of trees, water, ponds, and flowers, but when you really pay attention you realize how beautiful your surroundings are. For example, when you look at the reservoir you just see water. When you really look at it, from my perspective I see, a great view of glistening water and a beautiful fountain in the middle of the reservoir that stands out like the Statue of Liberty on Liberty Island. It's also 1.58 miles of greatness. Furthermore, Central Park is filled with trees. They are everywhere, but some people think all trees are the same. When you look at leaves on the trees closely you see different shapes and sizes growing on the trees. The different types of trees are like the many cultures of people who are living in New York City. The flowers in Central park are so colorful it's like a rainbow. Lastly, the duck pond is shining like the sun. All the ducks and boats just float away where the wind takes them.

Trees

“Person without the knowledge of their past history, origin and culture is like a tree without roots.” Marcus Garvey

Reservoir

“It is the small things in life which count; it is the inconsequential leak which empties the biggest reservoir.” Charles Comiskey

Duck Pond

“A society should never become like a pond with stagnant water, without movement. That's the most important thing.” Mikhail Gorbachev

Flowers

“Love is the flower you've got to let grow.” John Lennon

Central Park In Different Angles

The background image shows a serene lake scene. In the foreground, the water is dark with gentle ripples. A wooden walkway or bridge runs diagonally across the middle ground, with a few people walking on it. The far shore is lined with dense, lush green trees under a cloudy sky. The overall tone is peaceful and natural.

Author's Note

Central Park is a beautiful place in many ways. To me Central Park is a stand out tourist attraction because of its beauty. Central Park is just plain great!
